ABOUT THE CLUB

Entomology club has been active ever since its inception in 1970. The club is headed by a President, usually, the Head of the Department, a treasurer from among the staff and a Secretary and a Joint Secretary from among the P.G. students. Totally 197 members have enrolled in the club since its inception and are now scattered far and wide. The club is open for all interested in insects. The annual membership fee is Rs.10/- with an admission fee of Rs.5/-. One of the important activities of the club is to exchange ideas with eminent Entomologists and naturalists through guest lectures and expeditions.

The club successfully conducted three annual exhibitions of insects and their ways of life for the general public in Bangalore. These were held at Visweswariah Industrial and Technological Museum, Gandhi Bhavan and Rotary Club of Bangalore. The exhibitions attracted a large number of visitors and inculcated the awareness of insects among the public. The club has also participated at several school activities in Bangalore. It was also possible on certain occasions to exhibit and educate school children about insects.

The club members took active part in taking round the school children whenever the schools arranged such visits to the Department. The club actively participated in the training programme held in the University on bee-keeping. More than 500 people from all walks of life, irrespective of age, sex and education have been trained in bee-keeping.

Members of the club actively participated in the conduct of the VII International Congress on Acarology held at Bangalore during August 3-9, 1986. Dr. G.P. ChannaBasavanna, former President of the club was the President of the Congress.
